2. Objectives

2.1. Overall Objective(s):

To enhance the capacities of both chief civil administrators who have crucial duties, authorities and responsibilities about crowd control and the civil inspectors about effective investigation and so enable the convergence of the implementations in Turkey with European Union (EU) practices in the field.

2.2. Project purpose(s):

To enhance the capacities both of chief civil administrators on the protection of sensitive balance between freedom and security within the framework of security governance and the civil inspectors on making more effective inspection and investigation about both chief civil administrators who cannot perform their duties properly and law enforcement personnel who cause violations of rights during crowd control.

2.3. Contribution to National Development Plan/Cooperation agreement/Association Agreement/Action Plan:

Turkey has made significant reforms in the fields of the judiciary and fundamental rights over the past decade, a development that has its roots in the country's EU accession process.

Turkey's National Action Plan for the EU Accession that has been prepared within the scope of "Turkey's New European Union Strategy". This plan already sets out the priorities regarding the harmonization of primary and secondary legislation and development of the institutional capacities related to the Chapter 23 Judiciary and Fundamental Rights for the period from June 2015 to June 2019.

Those priorities are freedom of expression, including freedom of the press, freedom of assembly and demonstration, freedom of religion and cultural rights protected and strengthened through targeted training completed on human rights and investigation techniques for judges, public prosecutors, law enforcement officers and civil administrators, including effective investigation of allegations of torture in line with the framework of the Istanbul Protocol. Further priorities are upgraded detention centres in conformity with international standards, effective follow up mechanisms for the European Convention for Human Rights (ECHR) preventing repeated violations of the Convention and for the European Court of Human Rights (ECtHR), definition and implementation of ethical principles for law enforcement officers and effective reporting, registration and follow up of human rights violations.

Turkey's 10th Development Plan (DP) (2014-2018) is in line with the fundamental rights sub-sector main objectives in the sense that the Plan aims to ensure the full enjoyment of rights and freedoms by all individuals without any discrimination. One of the aims of the Plan is guaranteeing human rights and individual freedoms with a just and quick working justice system.

Under the title of "Fundamental Rights and Freedoms" of this Plan, the purpose is described as "Individuals and different groups in the society could express themselves totally and freely, a society where all beliefs and lifestyles are accepted with the understanding of free - pluralistic democracy." In the Constitution, it is said that sex, age, ethnicity, language, colour, belief, religion, income, nationality, migrant and political choice will not cause any discrimination, all citizens' fundamental rights and freedoms are ensured. To do so, it is emphasized that fundamental rights and freedoms will continue being developed under universal principles and norms. In compliance with the democratisation package announced by the government at September 30, 2013; Law no. 6529 "Law Amending Certain Laws for the Enhancement of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms" entered into force on 13 March 2014. Based on the latter law, crucial steps were taken on Law no. 2911 on "Assemblies and Demonstrations". As regards freedom of assembly, the democratisation package provides that the authorities will consult stakeholders before making decisions on assemblies and demonstrations, and extends the time periods within which meetings and demonstration marches can be held, giving authority for monitoring and terminating the meetings to an ad hoc body including representatives of demonstrators.

As a result, from the latter laws, there is a clear commitment to ensure further improvements in the area of fundamental rights and freedoms

3. Description

3.1. Background and justification:

In Turkey, significant steps have been taken in order to democratize the execution of the right to assembly and demonstrate. International conventions on fundamental rights and freedoms are given precedence over domestic laws. Though the regulations and amendments introduced during the Tenth Development Plan period are targeted at securing the healthy functioning of the justice system and extend fundamental rights and freedoms, , severe problems are observed in implementation; chief civil administrators do not take enough initiative and in some cases, the law enforcement personnel use disproportional power – excessive force - against protestors. In other words, the troubles within the implementation and implicit bans related to legislation are evaluated as hidden permission mechanism for the enjoyment of the right to assembly and demonstrate. Problem on harmonization of implementations EU acquis and European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR) criteria is another important problem area.

On the other side, it is seen that social events has been changing methodologically and numerically in Turkey. It is seen that the number of total activities / demonstrations have been increased in Turkey. For instance, based on the statistics of social events in Turkey between the years 2009 and 2013 it can be seen that although there were 18.101 social movements happened in 2009, the number of social movements increased to 38.079 in 2013.

As a matter of fact, from record of judgements listed by European Court on Human Rights (ECtHR), Turkey has ranked first among other states in number of violations of right of assembly and demonstration, mostly during the period 1959-2014. There is also European Commission's view on Turkey has not made progress concerning fundamental rights, violations on freedom of expression and demonstration. Moreover, it is said that around 150 applications are waiting before the Courts. Three primary motives in the judgements of the ECtHR about Turkey are: the violent intervention of police forces in peaceful protests occurring without reasonable notice, the disproportionate use of force against protestors by police forces and the absence of an effective investigation concerning personnel of law enforcement authorities when using disproportionate force.

Ministry of Interior is responsible for allowing and ensuring respect of public order during crowd control in Turkey according to Turkish national laws. This duty is performed by chief civil administrators who act as territorial representatives of the Ministry of Interior. In other words, chief civil administrators (governors and district governors) are the main authorities to make decisions during crowd control. Additionally, law enforcement personnel who make violations of right shall be investigated by the Ministry of Interior Inspection Board.

The Inspection Board is one of the Advisory and Supervisory Units of Ministry of Interior. There are 192 inspectors within this Board. Its' main functions are to inspect and audit, review and investigate transactions and accounts of all central units and affiliated entities of the Ministry, provinces, districts, national police and gendarmerie, municipalities and local governments and of the unions, enterprises and establishments affiliated with or founded by the foregoing or by special laws. The Ministry of Interior' Inspection Board is one of the most well-established and effective state institutions in the implementation of public policies. This unit is the main actor for investigating any complaints and carrying regular inspections of actions and processes of national police and gendarmerie in Turkey. A number of inspections, investigations etc. are carried out, and results of reports are prepared and submitted to the minister by the inspectors. Additionally, the Ministry of Interior's Inspection Board is an important tool both in spreading and disseminating of policies and reform initiatives throughout the country in the EU accession process of Turkey and also execution of new laws nation-wide.

Within the scope of this activity, the capacities of both chief civil administrators who are main actors and decision making authorities about crowd control and also civil inspectors who are responsible to investigate law enforcement personnel who could cause violations of right will be enhanced and in this way enjoyment of mentioned rights at universal level will be provided. As a direct result of this situation, new legal regulations and arrangements on crowd control put into practice nation – wide, reaching the goals about the fundamental rights and freedoms that are determined by the several documents ratified and introduced by Turkey and also eliminates the criticisms on the issue mentioned by the Progress Reports prepared by the European Commission.

In this framework, not only the necessary reformation of related regulations will be continued in the lights of international agreements and treaties but also the principles and policies about the crowd control will be prepared under the guidance of new arrangements.

Bringing the Turkish legal framework into line with European standards in all areas, notably freedom of expression and freedom of assembly; ensuring that courts and authorities fully implement legislation and rules so that rights are respected in full and in practice, with proper accountability and verification systems; Developing the capacity to conduct independent, impartial and effective investigations into allegations of misconduct by security forces.
