German Elections: The End of an Era, a cura di Antonio Villafranca e Carlo Mongini, 24 settembre 2021

The German elections are just around the corner. After Angela Merkel's 16-year-long reign, Germany seems to be heading towards a three-way coalition with the Social Democrats as the senior partner. Will the new government support a swift, green and digital transition? Between Washington and Beijing, what changes for Berlin's foreign policy? Will austerity make a comeback in Germany and the EU? And which prospects for German relations with Italy and France?

France's Presidential Election in Times of War, a cura di Antonio Villafranca e Carlo Mongini, 10 aprile 2022

France heads to the polls for its presidential election as Europe's political agenda is derailed by the war in Ukraine. Macron is attempting to hold on to power following a harder than expected electoral campaign. Though international credibility seems to favour the President, the state of the economy, price surges, and a modest track-record on reforms play against him. Will Macron lead France for a second term? What chances does his far-right contender Marine Le Pen have? To what extent do the Ukraine conflict and domestic policies affect the election? What is the possible impact on Europe?
